“ Even the likes of BMW and all the big car manufacturers, they are already looking for hemp material to use in the panels and dashes of their cars.

Hemp harvesting: 'There is potential for 80,000 rural jobs'

Claire Mc Cormack | Jul 4, 2019, 5:59pm

Up to 80,000 rural jobs could be created if suitable farm enterprises opted to diversify into hemp production, a Teagasc specialist has stated.

Speaking on FarmLand, Barry Caslin Teagasc specialist in energy and rural development urged the Government to embrace the crop's potential as global demand for its components "escalates at a rapid rate".

His views were backed by business woman Leah Fletcher, the co-founder of deDanú Limited, a company that manufactures and processes hemp in the midlands.

Caslin outlines that Teagasc has been involved in research into hemp – a strain of the Cannabis sativa plant grown specifically for industrial uses – since the 1960s.

Industrial hemp has a tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) content of less than 0.2% – meaning that it doesn't contain the psychoactive component.
